I just don't want this to go wrong for Tio. What if Brooks tells someone? We're taking him to a planet full of scientists. There's every chance they realize a real life alien is here? And then they'll turn Tio into a science experiment! Or the government will take him and force him to do, I dunno, diplomat stuff. Tio would make a terrible diplomat.

Context note: Setting up shrines is Sonia's ultimate passion in life. Explaining it to her new alien friend is a deep joy for her.

SONIA

Saturn is the newest spirit among us. He watches over not just Rizuma, but all the new colonies out here. He protects adventurers, explorers, bravery, sacrifice, and courage. Spirits are beings that exist beyond what we can see. They're everything. They're in the moons, in the planets, and even in things like love, the wind, or concepts like wealth. There's a lot of them. There's lots of small spirits. Missing socks, cool breezes on hot summer days, old friendships, good thrift finds, ducklings. They get forgotten about a lot, I wish I had room for more. I don't want to crowd them, though. Seems disrespectful. And these are important to me. So yeah, these are the ones I have.
